MMDA marvels at Seoul traffic reform program

By Phila. [unclear]

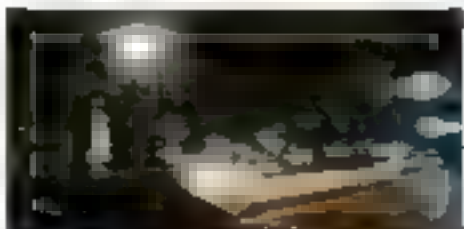

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) is studying the traffic reform program in Seoul, South Korea, as a model for improving traffic in Manila.

The MMDA is the lead agency in the Metropolitan Manila Area Traffic Study, a project funded by the Asian Development Bank (ADB) and the World Bank. The study is part of a larger effort to improve traffic in the Metro Manila area, which is one of the most congested in the world.

The Seoul program, which was implemented in 1988, is a landmark project in traffic reform. It involved a comprehensive study of the city's traffic system, followed by a series of reforms designed to improve traffic flow and reduce congestion.

The reforms included the implementation of a strict traffic law, the creation of a traffic police force, and the introduction of a traffic management system. The result was a significant improvement in traffic conditions in Seoul, with a reduction in congestion and an increase in the speed of travel.

The MMDA is currently studying the Seoul program in detail, and is planning to implement similar reforms in Manila. The study is expected to be completed by the end of the year, and the results will be used to guide the implementation of the traffic reform program in Manila.

Statement of the Coalition for the ICC

The Philippine Coalition for the International Criminal Court (PCCIC) is a non-governmental organization (NGO) that was established in 1991. Its primary objective is to promote the establishment of an international criminal court (ICC) that would have jurisdiction over the most serious crimes of international concern, including genocide, crimes against humanity, and war crimes.

The PCCIC believes that the establishment of an ICC is essential for the promotion of international justice and the prevention of future atrocities. It has been actively engaged in a campaign to raise awareness of the need for an ICC and to lobby the United Nations to establish such a court.

The PCCIC has a broad base of support, including government officials, legal experts, human rights activists, and the general public. It has organized numerous seminars, conferences, and public hearings to educate the public about the importance of an ICC and to build support for its establishment.

The PCCIC is currently working to secure the necessary political and financial support for the establishment of an ICC. It is also working to ensure that the court is established in a manner that is consistent with the principles of international law and justice.

Figure 1 illustrates the experimental setup. A participant is seated at a table, looking at a video screen. On the screen, a target (a small circle) is displayed. The participant's hand is positioned at a starting point (a larger circle). The distance between the starting point and the target is labeled as 'Distance'. The participant's hand is also labeled as 'Hand'.

The diagram illustrates the experimental setup. A subject is seated at a table, looking at a video screen. A video camera is positioned above the screen. A horizontal bar is placed between the subject and the screen. The screen displays a target (a small circle) and a starting point (a larger circle). The subject's hand is positioned at the starting point. The diagram is labeled with 'Subject', 'Video Camera', 'Video Screen', 'Horizontal Bar', 'Target', and 'Starting Point'.

Figure 1 shows a schematic diagram of a 2D hexagonal lattice. The lattice is composed of solid circles representing atoms. A central atom is labeled 'A'. To its right is an atom labeled 'B'. Above 'A' is an atom labeled 'C'. Below 'A' is an atom labeled 'D'. To the left of 'A' is an atom labeled 'E'. To the right of 'B' is an atom labeled 'F'. The lattice is bounded by a dashed line. Figure 1 consists of two heatmaps. The left heatmap is titled 'number of species' and the right is titled 'number of species per 100 m²'. Both heatmaps show a spatial distribution of species richness across a grid. The x-axis represents the spatial coordinate from 0 to 100, and the y-axis represents the spatial coordinate from 0 to 100. The color scale ranges from 0 (dark) to 100 (light). Both heatmaps show a similar pattern of high species richness in the center and lower richness towards the edges.

The diagram shows a 2D hexagonal lattice. A central hexagonal cell is highlighted with a thick black border. Arrows point from this central cell to its six immediate neighbors. The lattice is composed of smaller hexagonal cells. The distance between the centers of two adjacent cells is labeled 'a'. The length of the bonds connecting the cells is labeled 'b'.

Figure 1 is a schematic representation of the experimental design. It shows a sequence of events: a subject is presented with a stimulus (a word), then a response is given (a word), and finally a feedback is provided (a word). The sequence is repeated for multiple trials. The diagram is divided into three main sections: 'Stimulus', 'Response', and 'Feedback'. Each section contains a box representing the stimulus, response, or feedback, and a box representing the subject's internal state. Arrows indicate the flow of information between these components.
